NEW YORK CITY

U.S. Army War College
New York City Trip

Trip Purpose

The NYC field trip is an integral part of the AWC resident educational experience. It is a unique opportunity to expose students to large and complex public and private enterprises with the objective of examining local, national, regional and international issues within the dynamic urban environment of America's premier city- and the world's financial capital....this is done to help the students gain exposure to the strategic leadership challenges experienced by senior executives in the civilian community and a broader perspective of international and domestic considerations which effect national security policy.

Students can also gain a deeper appreciation for the serious competition for “discretionary funds” in the

Academic Learning Objectives

- Understand the nature of contemporary urban issues
- Evaluate how the challenges faced by cities affect national security policy and strategy
- Evaluate leadership and thought processes, to include strategic vision, used by senior executives in state and local government and the private sector
- Understand how other nations view contemporary global issues, the United States, and the United Nations
- Evaluate approaches to managing global problems through the United Nations
- Educate civic leaders about the military through contact and dialogue with Army War College
